

The relationship between employee evaluation score & employee satisfaction by department & employee churn

There seems to be a negative relationship between employee review scores & employee satisfaction: the higher review scores employees get the less satisfied they are,

The average hours the employee worked in a month also seem to be involved in this relationship

Visual inspections suggest that the intercept and slope differences across those who left the company are noteworthy